

A full-page background image of a vibrant green rice field. In the lower-left foreground, there is a rustic fence made of interwoven wooden sticks and branches. The rice plants are tall and dense, filling the rest of the frame.

ICIMOD would like its work to be a strategic response to the challenges of the Hindu Kush-Himalayan region in adaptation to climate change. To address this issue, ICIMOD works in three main programmes – water, environment, and livelihoods of the region’s inhabitants. Sharing the knowledge that ICIMOD gathers or generates is a framework supporting all the programmes.

This year the programmes have been working more closely together to respond to the realities of this mountainous region.

Strategic Programmes

A woman enjoys the benefit of a new safe water supply, Selbal Nakot, West Garo Hills, Meghalaya, India