

Jeannette Denholm Gurung is an American who has lived for 15 years in Nepal. She has been professionally involved in the mountain areas of Nepal and the HKH region for over 14 years. She received her MSc in Forestry and is now pursuing a PhD in Gender and Development at the School of Development Studies, University of East Anglia, U.K. In addition to coordinating the Fact Finding Mission project on the status of women in the HKH, Jeannette coordinated the Himalayan component of Gender, Environment and Sustainable Livelihoods Project', an Asian-wide sponsored initiative to conduct research on women's indigenous knowledge related to food, natural resource management, and livelihood strategies. She currently coordinates a programme to build the capabilities of the staff of 14 partner organizations (government and non-government organizations) working in agriculture and natural resource management in seven HKH countries to integrate gender into their programmes and organizations. She is married to a Bhutanese national and has one daughter.