

The Authors

Nepal, The Kingdom
and Oxford, 204p.

Grahame Applegate has been working for the past three and a half years as a forester in Nepal with the Nepal-Australia Forestry Project. Mr. Applegate holds a B.Sc. (Forestry) from the Australian National University and a M. Nat. Res. from the University of New England, Australia. The subject of his master's thesis was biomass estimations and management of natural forest ecosystems on Fraser Island, Australia. Prior to coming to Nepal, he worked in Australia as a Forest Ecologist on biomass and productivity studies in native forests. He also has experience in aspects of establishment and management of tropical pine plantations and the management of native forests in the sub-tropical regions of Australia.

Don Gilmour worked in Nepal during 1982 and 1983 as Project Manager with the Nepal-Australia Forestry Project and returned again in mid-1985 for a further term with the Project. Dr. Gilmour holds a B.Sc. (Forestry) from Queensland University, a M.Sc. from the Australian National University, and a Ph.D. from James Cook University of North Queensland. His previous experience included thirteen years as a Forest Hydrologist in rainforest areas of North Queensland, three years as the Principal of the Forestry Training Centre at Gympie, Queensland, and eighteen months as the Principal Research Officer in charge of the Forest Research Centre at Gympie, Queensland.

The views expressed are those of the authors and do not necessarily represent the views of ICIMOD or the organizations concerned.